Rewriting the Code is a growing virtual community of 9,000+ exceptional college and early career women with a passion for technology. These women are preparing to thrive as your next generation of engineers and tech leaders. They come from 450+ colleges and universities, and show their talent through engagements in projects, internships, hackathons, and volunteering for good.

Through recruiting and participation in year-round RTC programs and events, companies have the unique opportunity to not only attract female tech talent to their organizations, but to also be an influencing factor in their decision to continue their pursuit of technology.

Partnering with Rewriting the Code means having actionable impact on the lives of college women who are passionate about technology. As a company partner you gain access to a single pipeline where you can build relationships and recruit from a pool of diverse women.
